McGILL WELL REPRESENTED AT ASSEMBLY

Can. Students Convene Dec. 29th—Jan. 2nd.

CONSTITUTION PASSED.

E. C. Amaron, Chairman—Officers Elected — Miss Kerr Represents McGill.

The conference of Canadian students convened at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, December 29th to January 2nd, was in itself one of the most successful and stimulating meetings of the kind ever carried through by representatives of the Canadian colleges, and its results of great potential significance to the future of Christian work in these institutions. Practically every Christian organization in the dominantly Protestant colleges from Halifax to Vancouver was represented. The basis of representation was one voting member from each Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Missionary Society, etc., in each institution of higher learning. They were all represented with the exception of U.N.B.

The purpose of the gathering was to get the mind of the students, who were already connected with various lines of religious activity, on the question of a Student Christian Movement in Canada which should unite students engaged in this work throughout the Dominion, and give expression in a practical way to the national consciousness of a common task, growing largely out of the Des Moines Convention last year. That was the first national gathering of Canadian students called to consider Canadian problems. The recent conference was fully as representative but smaller in numbers, about 70 being present.

At this conference the students had full control. Those designated as "senior persons" and "secretaries" sat back to listen. Mr. E. C. Amaron, of McGill, was unanimously elected as chairman of the convention, and fully justified the faith of his electors by his efficiency in handling the meetings. The sessions throughout were marked by unusual enthusiasm and sustained interest even to the end of long periods of discussion on such ordinarily dry business as constitution making. The delegates held points of view as varied as the local situations from which they came. There were those who felt that they could never consent to a Movement which meant detachment from the Y.M.C.A. Others said that any Movement to which they could subscribe must be no part of that organization.

NEW REST-ROOM FOR NEXT WEEK

R. V. C. At Last to Have a Common Room in Arts Building.

Patience and a certain degree of persistence apparently have their own reward. After a general and tumultuous out-cry the outraged feeling of the Arts students were assuaged by the return of their stolen smoking-room in all its former magnificence; and now several years of more restrained but none the less moving appeals on the part of the R. V. C. see the attainment of their hopes in the construction of a girls' common-room during the holidays.

For days past the tapping of hammers and the rasp of the saw could be heard in the entrance hall of the Arts Building, apparently proceeding from some unknown regions to the east. But now the mystery has been solved. A hostel for worn-out lumber and broken-down desks has been transformed into a "restroom" for the fair sex.

Any investigator is well rewarded for the hazardous journey through a maze of paint pots and trestless by the sumptuous appearance of the new apartment. The walls are beautifully finished off with beaver-board, while the floors are covered with a very striking variety of white wood—probably spruce. It is also rumored that there will be provision made for curtains and other forms of decorations so dear to the feminine heart. Chintz in the Arts Building—shades of the Classics!

Unfortunately the new rest-room is not ready for immediate occupation as there is still a certain amount of paint work to be done, but according to the authorities this should all be finished with by the end of the present week. After that date the imprudent stude who presumes to enter the building by the door to the right of the main entrance will probably be seen beating a hasty retreat his face suffused with unmanly blushes. All of which goes to show that Tennyson was more or less correct when he said that the old order changeth yielding place to new. Apparently even the old Arts Building is no exception.

INTERCLASS HOCKEYISTS TO PRACTICE

Ice Survives the Bad Thaw Well.

SNAPPY START.

Everyone Interested in Hockey Should Get Busy.

In spite of warm weather the ice on the Campus Rink is still ready for use. The Regulars have been working hard all the time, but there is a very evident lack of material for the three teams. Last year a couple of unlucky accidents helped 'Varsity to a championship to no small extent and McGill will have to show a greater interest in hockey to hold her place in the greatest Canadian game. The best way to help out is to turn out for Class Hockey Practices and show form. There are hours for every one and practices will be going on all day. If you didn't bring the skates with you go home at noon and bring them back with you. There is a Class Manager in your class; get after him to-day and keep after him. There will be pads and pucks over at the rink; all that McGill needs is players. This is particularly true for the underclassmen; they will be here for two or three more years and now is the chance to get in line for that Big "M". There are a lot of good players who stay camouflaged because they are too modest to try out on the ice. Get that idea safely into the ash-can and—leave it there.

Remember, the matches start in ten days, and after exams Arts, Commerce and Law will join with Science and Medicine in a rattling single series to find the best class in Old McGill. Everyone plays everyone else, just as hard and as fast as they can go, and the winners get the Capper Porter Trophy and their Numerals. But that is not all. This series will pit every man who is worth while in hockey against everyone else and if no one moves up to a job with one of the regular squads, why, it's their own fault, abso—bally—utely. If the weather holds, and we have really got the January thaw off our chest beforehand, why, there will still be time for an all-star inter-faculty series "pour l'amour" by way of an argument settler.

Just a word to those class managers. The Rink Manager will be over to every practice this week to start things going. Have your men all canvassed and medically examined, and then he can get this attendance bogey all right. Then there won't be any protests or defaulted games and no bother about gymnasium absences, but the class manager must see that his men turn out and that the attendance is properly recorded. The Ladies Rink will be available from 6.15 to 7.15 p.m. for those who have been allotted hours. The timetable will stand as last published, and it has been dis-

MEETING HELD ON DEC. 20TH BY STUDENTS

Monthly Publication Project Held Over.

AID POLISH STUDENTS.

Society in Favor of Raising Funds for Polish Relief.

The closing moments of the pre-Christmas session were spent by a little over one hundred students in a Students' Society meeting in the Union. This assembly had been called for the purpose of rendering a definite decision on the question of a student monthly magazine.

It will be recalled that at the Society meeting held a few days previous to the one mentioned above the Student body had expressed themselves as being in favor of a student monthly publication. Considerable discussion followed as to the control of the paper, but nothing was decided, as the attendance dwindled until finally no quorum was present. When the meeting adjourned, President Learoyd announced that another would be called on the following Monday to finally decide the matter.

On Sunday, December 19th, the Students' Council met in the Union, and amongst other matters discussed the magazine proposition for three hours. After considerable discussion and the voicing of many opinions, a motion was drafted to be presented to the Student Society. The substance of the motion was that the Council did not feel that they could undertake the publication of the paper for financial reasons, but that as the Society had expressed themselves as desiring a monthly, the Council were in favor of giving the right of publication to any group of students who would apply for it, provided that they agreed to certain rules. These rules were to be laid down in a constitution to be drawn up by the Council and the editors of the magazine, and included a stipulation that if the venture proved a financial success the publishers would pay a certain percentage of their profits to the Students' Society for the privilege granted them.

The meeting of the Society called for Monday was scheduled to begin at five o'clock, but owing to the slim attendance this was impossible. After considerable trouble, which included telephoning to Strathcona Hall for reinforcements, and gathering up all available men, it was found that a quorum was present.

The first business brought before the meeting was that of aid for the suffering students of Poland. It was explained that some few weeks ago

DISCUSSION OF SOCIAL DISEASES

Moving Picture Demonstration and Lecture in Union Next Friday.

By special arrangement with the Superior Board of Health of the province of Quebec a moving picture demonstration and lecture is to be given in the Union on Friday, Jan. 7th, at 5.15 p.m.

This meeting has been called for a discussion of Social Diseases. The Division of Venereal Diseases of the Provincial Board of Health has taken a deep interest in this meeting. This is shown by the fact that, through its influence, some of the foremost speakers and authorities in the country will be present to give short addresses. Dr. W. W. Chipman, Dr. F. S. Patch and Dr. A. H. Desloges, the Director of Venereal Diseases Division of the Provincial Board of Health, will speak.

A growing consciousness that a great deal of the disastrous results of social diseases can be prevented by judicious and wisely disseminated knowledge of the dangers of such diseases has led the Provincial Health authorities to institute an Anti-Venereal Campaign. Already a great deal of very valuable work has been done in this connection.

Realizing that it is of tremendous importance to the welfare of the country that our young men should possess a maximum of vigor without the stigma of disease, Sir Arthur Currie has kindly consented to act as Chairman at the meeting.

THE NEW YEAR

It is not only interesting but profitable as one comes to the beginning of another year to spend a few moments in a personal stock-taking, a weighing and balancing, a self-assessment. One does not change very greatly in the main from season to season. One should, however, be able to record a certain amount of advancement in some or other direction if one's time has not been spent unintelligently. The years' endings are not boundaries between totally different states but rather milestones which mark one's progress along the way. In so far as this holds good, then, the resolve to enter upon a different mode of life at the beginning of any given year is likely to be but short-lived at best. A saner and more properly tenable point of view would be that the commencement of the new season, the turning of the fresh page, offers, perhaps, an occasion for a retrucing of one's aims, a further verification of the essential correctness of one's line of endeavor and, if necessary, a change of plan to coincide with whatever conclusions have been drawn from the further and now-completed period of observation. The opportunity, in a word, is for "checking up."

Plotinus, in his Enneads, depicts for us the drama of mankind abandoning the perfection which is its right for the simple value of recovering it. He teaches that the soul deliberately chose to descend from the perfection of Heaven in which it had lived before birth to inhabit and govern a body. Not only was its choice of imperfection deliberate but its destiny was merely a steady and painful and again deliberate climb back to the realm from which it came. If this be true it becomes very essential that at regular intervals one should pause to take one's bearings. If progress is being made nothing is better for morale than to be aware of it and without morale no enterprise, even individual, is likely to be successful for long. Our suggestion would be, then, that instead of formation of resolutions there be a balancing of accounts, a redirecting rather than a reformation and an unswerving maintenance of the reverified course with Mr. Micawber's recipe for happiness always in mind.

All equipment taken out will have to be signed for, and no man can get on the ice without his "A" or "B" card. A few men have not furnished their names to the Manager. It would help greatly if those Class Managers who have not done so would drop in at the Union and leave their Name Class, Year and Phone. Address to the Class Hockey Manager, Union.

NEW LONDON BRIDGE.

"No cost to ratepayers." This announcement made the heads of many London households rub their eyes and ask if it could be a misprint. But it is absolutely true of the fine new bridge at Southwark, which is now being completed. The ratepayers are not asked to pay a single farthing of the cost of construction or of maintenance of this work which, in 1912, was estimated for at a cost of £261,000. The Bridge House Trust, formed many centuries ago by private benefactions, meets the entire outlay.

THE SERVICE STATION
"Free Air"

And so to another annum.

One by one the old myths pass away. The report that there was a man up in Northern Ontario who wrote nothing of a serious nature before six years of age now proves to have been the work of an enterprising publicist. When tracked down and questioned, the wretch confessed that he commenced at or about eight months.

Much sympathy is felt among those who matter for the member of the O. L. Union who, on coming from lectures, was obliged to take his own coat. Nothing will blight deserving enterprise more quickly than outrages of this nature.

The Mari-West Foot Must Be a Heavy One, Indeed.

(The "Daily," Dec. 18.)

"To say that last night's dance given by the Maritime-Western Clubs was a ripping success is to put it mildly indeed, for from the very start jollity marked the first of the sectional club dances given in the Union this season. The absence of all worry on the part of the merrymakers was particularly obvious."

In other words, he who rips and cares not that he rips will have a pleasant evening.

Our Book Reviews.

The Oxford Dictionary. Edited by Sir James Murray, Henry Bradley, W. A. Craigie, C. T. Onions. Imperial 4to, pp. 14,500 (approx.). Oxford University Press.

This work is much too long. The dramatic has been sacrificed for pages of unnecessary and tedious realism. In the effort towards this, dramatic arrangement has been eschewed. The consequence is that the work fails to make an impression. . . . Yet with it all the book has a certain value. It is easy to understand what a reviewer meant by writing that it had a touch of epic breadth. The admirable thing about this work is that it keeps to earth; it neither soars nor does it sink. The authors have shown a certain power in realism. They have returned to the old idea — they do not stress the abnormal or sordid. The whole would be very effective if it were not for certain faults, those which must always be expected in a first dictionary. As it is, this dictionary is appreciably better than the average.

In Which the Union May Branch Out Into Boots.

("Daily" Notices.)

"If the gentleman (?) who stole my rubbers will return to-morrow at 2 p.m. and present his Union card I will give him the boots that go in them.

"M. R. K., Med. '25."

Bill Jones.

I like Bill Jones, a decent sort of guy.
He doesn't talk too much nor yet too well.
He hasn't once spread anything that I
Passed on to him and asked him not to tell.

He's thoughtful of his fellows, too, is Bill;
Bill never pulled a senseless joke on me,
Nor laughed when someone else did it, until
Long after, when we two alone could be.

Bill knows my girl, too, thinks that she is quite
The finest that his eyes have rested on;
And this I'll say for him, the boy is white,—
He never jokes about me being "gone."

I like Bill Jones, a decent sort of cuss.
I haven't caught Bill telling me a lie.
We've never had the slightest sort of fuss.
The reason? Well, the fact is, Bill is I.

GUILLAUME.

It was with surprise that one learned that only forty unemployed reported to the city officials to assist in cleaning the streets. Where is N. Romanoff now, who liked to shovel snow?

Attempts are now being made to estimate Woodrow Wilson's place in history before he has even vacated office. These essays at evaluation of a man's work while said man is still alive and (it may be) kicking, must always be in vain. History has a fashion of doing its own assessing in its own way and at its own convenience.

Little as we are ordinarily given to first-night enthusiasms, it is our recommendation that if such a thing be necessary, you go so far as to pawn the family plate in order to see Sir Martin Harvey in "Garrick." We have seldom been privileged to witness a performance equal to that he gave last night. Not only do the actor-knight and his associates serve to strengthen the bonds of Empire by their mere presence in Canada, but the nature of their work is such that it does much to maintain a proper Imperial self-respect in matters histrionic.

Ten Minutes With The Principal

Although the Undergraduate Session begins to-day, our busy Principal has apparently been hard at work long in advance of the student body. For, when the "Daily" representative sought an interview with Sir Arthur yesterday afternoon, he perforce stayed outside the "sanctum sanctorum" on the waiting-bench until the Principal had satisfied a rush of eager callers. The chance came at an odd moment when the coast was clear, and the items below were commented upon and thrown out as hints of what the year 1921 has in store for Old McGill. After extending his best wishes to the student body for the New Year, and expressing a desire that the holidays may have given the necessary zeal to send all men through the exam.-time and long term, Sir Arthur mentioned the subject of dormitories.

Dormitories.

In answer to many queries around the Campus as to the prospects of the introduction of the long-desired "dorms." at McGill, Sir Arthur stated that at the last meeting of the Governors, held prior to Christmas, the following members were appointed a special committee—Messrs. Ross, Birks, Beattie, Neal, Molson and Brown. This body is to confer with the Principal and to decide on the policy of spending the endowment money; one determination of the committee is that, outside of the immediate matters of salaries, classrooms, etc., the item of primary importance is the erection of dormitories. The committee is now making a circular enquiry of the important universities of the continent that have a dormitory system at the present time. These circulars contain a series of questions, seeking information as to size, methods of accomodation, groupings and arrangements, system of management, discipline, use of dormitories in vacation-time, the advisability of having members of the University Staff as residents and other such items of detail. On receipt of replies, and after a definite formulation of plans, the committee will report to the Governors their plans for the immediate use of the endowment funds. The general opinion is that a start will be made on dormitories, making their erection the immediate aim of the Board, for, as Sir Arthur said, "We would be breaking faith with the friends of McGill unless a start is made on dormitories."

The policy of the Governors regarding the buildings, according to the Principal, is to make them primarily of service to the student, with the practical side of their erection given precedence over any tendency towards extravagant architecture. Student-welfare and student-comfort will be the main aims, with adequate common-rooms and home-like surroundings emphasized above all.

Re Memorial Hall.

When enquiring on the question of the Memorial Convocation Hall, the "Daily" was advised that there is at present nothing to be stated on the matter. With so many calls on the funds of immediate student-importance, the money must be made to go as far as possible and to do the most for the practical needs of McGill. At the same time, Sir Arthur stated that he realized the need of a suitable Convocation Hall for the University, and that they were not losing sight of the matter. They realized the congested condition of the Arts and Law Buildings, and the need for a University Gymnasium, and were going to keep these needs in mind.

Returned Men.

With reference to university aid for McGill Returned Men, the Principal mentioned that he was entirely sympathetic with all veterans, and wished to aid them wherever possible, in order to keep them at college. Individual aid has already been given in cases of special need, and the authorities are most eager to help the men who really need the assistance. Sir Arthur is at the present time getting facts from the data that he has on hand, and is especially desirous of classifying the various circumstances of service of all McGill Returned Men.

Lengthening of Term.

There will not be any extension in the length of the term this year. The matter is still under consideration, but the numerous details of arrangement of class-schedules, courses, exams, and the like necessitate much discussion and investigation before any change can be made.

Athletics.

With regard to the rumor that freshmen would not be allowed to compete in intercollegiate sports, Sir Arthur stated that inasfar as he was concerned, the rumor was quite groundless. He expressed a desire to see McGill a winning college in sport, but not at the expense of sacrificing her academic standard. He was pleased at the success with which the inter-class and inter-faculty schedules of competitive sport have been run off this session, and hoped that all would make the best use of the coming schedules to foster class-spirit and a general sharing-up of undergraduate athletic activity.

What Would the Hon. Tom's Cousin, the Hon. Winston, Say to all This?

(N.Y. Sun, Dec. 25.)

"The Hon. Tom Churchill, who is Mayor of Toronto and a prince among good sportsmen if ever there was one, would like to see an ice hockey world series, not only in Canada but outside of Canada, stretching over the border into the United States. 'I say,' he did say to the writer, 'I do wish that the time shall come when we can have a ripping world series between the U.S. and Canada in the winter time, playing at ice hockey. I'd give no end to see a world series in baseball between the States and us, but while we are getting on a bit on our side of the St. Lawrence we can't quite make the pace of you American folks in baseball. We could keep you going well in ice hockey. You are a clever lot over there in athletics, but we would have a start on you in that game, and then you would have to come to us. When you caught us we would have to put our skating foot foremost to get away from you again.'

"'Mr. Mayor, there's not enough ice in the United States to give hockey a fair chance — that is not enough in those parts of the United States where the larger cities are located, to bring up the youth on skates in the winter time and incidentally educate him in hockey as the American boy is educated in baseball.'

ADMITS THE DRAWBACK.

"'Ah, I know,' said the Mayor of Toronto. 'It is a deuced drawback. There's New York for instance, that doesn't get enough free ice around the city in the winter time, although there is no end to it in the northern part of the State, and there's Baltimore and Philadelphia, where outdoor ice is too much of a rarity, and for that matter some of the cities in the northern belt do not have all the ice that the boys would like to see in the winter time. But you see I'm relying on artificial ice to see my wish made good. I think that as we go along, there will be more and more rinks in the cities, and that artificial ice will be able to supply the demand. Then, too, the North Pole they say is moving south, and it may get along in time some day to give New York skating ice out of doors all of the winter. But fun omitted, I hope the day will come when in some way there will be an ice hockey world series in the winter in which Canadian and United States teams can compete for a real international championship. I don't bar other countries. They can come from as far as they like. The more that are in the better.'"

"But Leap Year passing once in four,
The bashful man has three years more."

McQUOCHLE.

the Students' Council were approached with the request that they consider giving their support to a plan of collecting money and clothing for the destitute students of Central Europe. As this included the countries which were lately our enemies, the Council decided that they could give no sanction to any plan of giving aid to people who suffered through a war which they had waged against our country, but that they would support any relief measures for our late allies.

A short time after that meeting of the Council a letter was received from J. G. MacKay, secretary of Strathcona Hall, in which he placed before the students a plan of aiding students of Poland. In the letter was a copy of one from Mr. Rose, who wrote from Poland about the conditions existing in that country. The Council decided in favor of the relief measures, and drafted a motion to be presented to the Students' Society.

The Society placed itself on record as being in favor of the drive for money and clothing for this purpose, and further moved that the Students' Council give fifty dollars for this purpose.

When the main object of the meeting was broached, W. W. Beveridge spoke a few words about the proposed paper. He said that he was firmly of the opinion that it could not be run on a firm financial basis, and furthermore that under the existing circumstances, he felt that the "Daily" should be the only official McGill publication until such time in the future when another paper could be profitably operated by the Students' Council. He, therefore, moved that the question of a McGill monthly publication should be held in abeyance. This motion, which was seconded by D. Ambridge, was passed and the meeting was declared adjourned at 6.20 p.m.

From Our Files

As the "Daily" completes its tenth year of existence, it takes the opportunity of reviewing in brief the principal happenings of the past decade. It is hoped that the column which will appear in the paper for the remainder of the year under the above heading will form an accurate though short history of student activity at McGill during the past ten years.

Oct. 2nd, 1911.—First issue of the "McGill Daily," and first issue of a college daily in Canada appeared on the opening day of the ninetieth session of McGill University. The paper, consisting of four pages, sold for five cents a copy. Yearly subscription was voluntary. The original staff consisted of seven members, headed by W. G. Murray, as editor-in-chief.

Sir William Peterson, Principal of the University, delivered the opening address in the Royal Victoria College. This address had formerly been delivered in the large lecture room of the Chemistry Building.

Dean Adams announced that lectures in all departments of the Faculty of Science will begin at eight o'clock until November 15th.

Science Sophomores decide to abolish the bandage rush, following a request of this nature from the authorities.

Oct. 1st, 1912.—The four Theological Colleges affiliated with McGill University are putting into practice this season a scheme of co-operation far in advance of anything of this kind formerly attempted on this continent.

Coach Shaughnessy put a promising group of football enthusiasts through a stiff practice.

Dr. Wicksteed in a peculiar will left all his property, amounting to $58,000.00 to McGill. Besides this, a library, a collection of scientific instruments and paintings and maps were included in the bequest. The condition is that the ashes of the deceased are to repose in the college library.

Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing clubs amalgamated. A code of rules to govern the new club was drawn up by a special committee.

Oct. 2nd, 1912.—Principal Peterson opens session with an optimistic address delivered in the R.V.C. before a large and representative audience.

Inaugural ceremonies connected with the union of the Theological Colleges took place in the large hall of the R.V.C. A banquet was held that evening in the Windsor Hotel.

Oct. 1st, 1914.—Professor Birkett appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dean Shepherd, of the Medical Faculty.

Dr. F. P. Walton, former Dean of the Faculty of Law, resigned from that position to become legal adviser to the Government of Egypt.

Principal Peterson delivered an address on "The War and its Origin," at the Royal Victoria College.

Oct. 2nd, 1914.—H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught presided at the opening address of the session.

Dr. R. F. Ruttan, while attending the annual convocation of the University of Toronto, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Science, in recognition of his eminent position as a scientist and especially of his researches in the department of chemistry.

The honorary degree of D.Sc. was conferred upon Dean Adams during the summer, when he attended the convocation of Tufts University.

Oct. 1st, 1918.—Many McGill men figured in the list of decorations. Col. J. M. Elder, former head of the McGill hospital, received the C.M.G.

Football revived at McGill for the first time since 1914, although no intercollegiate games were to be played.

Dr. Jas. Douglas, a McGill graduate of '47, who received the honorary degree of LL.D. from his Alma Mater in '99, willed $50,000.00 to McGill. Dr. Douglas was a brilliant scientist and resided at the time of his death in Riverdale, N.Y.

Corporation passed a resolution, since well known, disapproving of the old-fashioned rush.

Exfensive alterations made to the Arts Building, including scraping of the floor of the old smoking room.

J. H. Falk, noted worker, appointed director of the new department of Social Service inaugurated at McGill.

"Duke" MacDonald broke a collar bone in the first hard workout of the football squad. Twenty-four men turned out at the Stadium for this practice.

New Tennis Courts erected on the site of the Campus Rink.

Oct. 2nd, 1918.—Vice-Principal, in delivering opening lecture of the session at the R.V.C., spoke of the Khaki College in England.

Final registration figures were as follows: Arts, 241; Commerce, 14; Medicine, 306; Dentistry, 41; Pharmacy, 14; Law, 40; Science, 156—totalling 812.

Oct. 1st, 1919.—Registration on the opening day of college session was almost as large as that of pre-war days. Applied Science, 601; Arts, 534; Medicine, 444; Dentistry, 72; Law, 103. This totalled 1782 and represented an increase of 555 over the previous year.

Joseph House to be renovated and to house the McCord National Museum. The curator was David Ross McCord, the donor of the priceless collection of relics.

During the past summer the death occurred of Dr. Charles Gould, who for nearly thirty years was the librarian of the Peter Redpath Library. Great tributes were paid the late librarian by his associates at the University.

Dr. Adams, former Dean of the Faculty of Science, becomes acting Principal of the University.

Prof. C. Derick, of the Faculty of Arts, was the first woman appointed as Associate of the Protestant Committee C.P.I.

Dr. Adami, former head of the department of Pathology at McGill, left Montreal to take up his duties as Principal of Liverpool University.

Oct. 2nd, 1919.—Dr. Adams, the acting Principal, delivered the opening address in the R.V.C. He touched upon the fine record of McGill men overseas and spoke of the great need of education in the re-establishment of the world.

The McGill Graduates decided to publish a quarterly magazine, to be called the "McGill News." Professor Stephen Leacock consented to act as editor-in-chief.

Registration figures showed an appreciable increase over those of last year.

Oct. 3rd and 4th for the last ten years will appear in to-morrow's "Daily."

CITY LEAGUE GAMES DURING XMAS SEASON

McGILL DEFEATED.

Scratch Team Was Badly Beaten by M.A.A.A. on Dec. 27th.

Six games in the City Hockey League were played during the Christmas holidays. On Dec. 27th, Westmount defeated the champion Victorias by 4 to 2 and McGill went down before M.A.A.A. by 7 to 1. Westmount's victory came as a great surprise as they were composed largely of last year's Intermediates and Juniors.

McGill's defeat can be easily explained by the fact that only one of last year's team, Dineen, was playing and most of the players had not played together before. Goal proved to be McGill's weak position on this occasion.

On Jan. 3rd, M.A.A.A. and Nationals were winners over Loyola and Victorias, the former winning by 7 to 5 and the latter by 2 to 1. A crowd of about 2000 witnessed the games.

The first game between M.A.A.A. and Loyola went 10 minutes overtime before M.A.A.A. finally scored the winning goal.

Victorias lost their second straight game, although strengthened considerably by Vee Heney on the defence. The Nationals, however, were in better condition, and displayed better team play throughout.

Loyola defeated St. Anns by 6 to 3 and Nationals beat Shamrock 9 to 2. In the first of these games an initial advantage of two goals gained at the start of the game was enough to win for Loyola, the rest of the game being very keenly contested.

Nationals were decidedly the best team in the second game, Shamrocks blowing up in the second period, during which Nationals scored five goals.

	Played	Won	Lost
M.A.A.A.	2	2	0
Nationals	2	2	0

There was every shade of opinion between these extremes, but never on any occasion was the sincerity of any position questioned by an exponent of an opposite view. The spirit at every stage was the finest. For a whole day opinions and suggestions were thrown into the melting pot, and from this some general principles gradually began to emerge, which in time took the form of a constitution for a new "Christian Student Movement of Canada," different in form from that which any one of the group had predicted, yet eminently satisfactory to all.

Working on the principles: First, that the Movement must be of the students and for the students; and, Second, that organization must be from the bottom upward, the following scheme was unanimously adopted:

The new organization will be called the "Student Christian Movement of Canada." This shall be a federation of Christian organizations in Canadian Colleges, each retaining, locally, entire autonomy and freedom to call itself by whatever name it desires. The machinery consists of a General Committee composed of two representatives, a man and a woman, from each of the three sections, Maritime Provinces, Centre and West; one representative each from the Y.M.C.A., Student Volunteers and Interim Committee, and a General Secretary. Regional Committees will also be formed to control areas and arrange for additional regional secretaries when necessary. Dr. H. B. Sharman has been appointed chairman of the General Committee; Miss Lorna Kerr, of R.V.C., vice-chairman; and Mr. E. H. Clarke, former National Student Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., will become General Secretary of the Movement.

MAYOR FOR SEVENTH TERM.

Thomas Langton Church, familiar to every McGill athlete who has visited Toronto, was on New Year's Day elected mayor of the Queen City for the seventh time. He secured a majority of 16,000 votes over ex-Controller MacBride, his opponent for mayoral honors.

STUDENTS OF POLISH UNIV. NEED SUPPORT

Starvation Faces People in This Country.

McGILL TO HELP.

Strathcona Hall to Direct Campaign for Clothes and Money.

Without a doubt all of us are aware to a certain extent of the terrible distress which is prevalent to most countries of Central Europe, but few of us are cognizant with the dire necessity which confronts the students and professors of these nations for whose welfare a campaign is being widely propagated.

We at McGill are concerned with but one phase at present, namely, the Polish Relief Fund. The people of Poland are the ones to-day who are urgently praying for help, and we, living at home, have our call at McGill.

Just at the moment when we in this country are welcoming a fall in prices as an indication of the return of normal conditions, there comes to us news of the increasing destitution and appalling misery throughout Central Europe, where countries bled white by the world war have been delayed in the process of reconstruction by continued disorder and factional fights. There is little cause for pride in our superior speed of recovery. Given their problems, their defeat, their general low level of education, we might not have done better. Wherever the blame may rest, the fact is patent that the lives of millions of innocent people are in danger this winter. True to its tradition of helpfulness, the Red Cross has already taken steps for relief on a large scale; and Hoover's Relief Commission has done much to alleviate the suffering. But these together are proving inadequate to the task.

Of particular interest to the college communities of more fortunate countries is the condition prevailing in the colleges throughout the central belt between the Baltic and the Black Sea. Students by the thousand are homeless, short of clothing and on the verge of starvation. The professors are very little better off. Living prices have steadily risen to many times their original standard, and professorial salaries have not risen. To-day, professors are working for less than common laborers, and selling out their belongings to maintain life for themselves and families. Some are appealing to friends in America for loans to prevent their children from starving.

Naturally, the first question to be asked by us is, "why do the students and professors stay at the universities and starve rather than go to work?" The answer is simple. So many thousands of skilled laborers are without work that the unskilled may seek in vain even for the roughest employment. In most cases they may as well continue their studies and starve.

If ever Europe needed its students and its professional men, its doctors, scientists and teachers, it is now and in the years that lie in the immediate future. The peril of ignorant and misguided mass movements has been all too apparent. With the culture and the trained intelligence that are the products of her universities, Europe will struggle through to the light. Remove them, and the world will soon again be forced to consider a problem more costly in solution than any relief measures that may be undertaken at the present time.

Extract from an Article by H. R. KEMP.

(Mr. Kemp is a student at Toronto, recently returned from Europe, where he assisted the Friends' Relief Committee in their efforts to check the deadly progress of starvation.)

It is becoming fairly well known that there is appalling misery in the broad belt lying between the Baltic and the Black Sea, and that the war has produced a condition of famine and hardship in the New Baltic States, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, the Ukraine, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Poland, Roumania and the Jugo-Slav Republic — not to mention Armenia. It is not, however, so generally realized that actual hunger and nakedness are depleting the ranks of the students in higher institutions of learning, to whom these countries would normally look for their future leadership.

When the war came, all these students were called to the colors; they served throughout the war, and although many of them were in the ranks of our enemies, the spirit of idealism and self-devotion was present among them as it was among the students of Oxford or Toronto. Meanwhile, their countries became impoverished; the struggle for existence at home became severe, and when they returned five years older, they had to take up the fight against a much sterner set of circumstances. Prices had risen in Austria to fifty times their pre-war level; in Germany, to ten or fifteen times their pre-war level; the income of their parents (who were to a large extent members of the salaried or profession classes) had remained behind. Mr. G. A. Gardiner quotes a conversation with the mayor of a large city, who was being paid less than a tram conductor. It has become impossible to buy clothes, books or even fuel and nourishing food. Thousands of students were compelled by sheer necessity to give up their courses even if they were half through. I know one such student, formerly an officer in the army — who gave up his course in order to support himself by working in a bookshop for a total salary of thirty-two cents a day. But unemployment is so widespread that it is impossible for many students to find either part-time or full-time work. They are not welcomed even on the farms.

Relief agencies in Austria, Poland, Germany and other countries concerned, have interviewed thousands of students and found that they are living on the verge of starvation. I have often had lunch in a vegetarian restaurant which was much patronized by University students on account of its comparative cheapness. For a sum which used to represent seventy-five cents, one can there obtain a dinner consisting of a plate of mushy beans with a few boiled potatoes. This elaborate menu was beyond the means of many of the students who went there, but for those who could afford such luxury, it was the day's principal meal. One has to eat it slowly in order to make it last longer.

It would take a longer time to describe the needs of the students in clothes, books and other necessities. In all the countries mentioned a large proportion of the men students are still wearing military uniform, which is an honorable garment even though frayed and tattered, and which buttons up closely to conceal the absence of shirts or underwear. Women are reduced to various expedients for supplying clothing. The sheets, once so jealously treasured by every family, have long since been cut up and made into underwear; even the window curtains have in many cases undergone a like transformation. Canadian students are not by any means wealthy, but the poverty and distress among the students of Central Europe is something almost unimaginable in Canada.

Yet this is the time when all the countries of Central Europe have need of students. A number of them (including Germany and Austria) cannot now support themselves by agriculture. They have lost their colonies, their shipping, their trade connections, the power to emigrate and the good-will of their neighbors. They need scientists, doctors, trained business men, teachers, to reconstruct the shattered fabric of their national life. Russian Poland (hardly yet at peace) has seventy per cent. of illiterates among its population—there is work for the graduates of half a dozen universities. Yet actual physical hardship is driving young people from the universities and sapping the strength of those who remain, while it is hard for them to rise above the conviction that nobody in the world cares for their condition, and that their whole nation is regarded as pariahs in Europe. The economic and social forces unleashed by the war are pulling down Europe's Philosophy Shops everywhere. If the process continues unchecked, the result will not be confined to one continent.

One touch of nature makes the whole world squirm.

REMARKABLE CASE OF THE PERRYS

Is the Now Famous Small Case Similar To It?

(By M. E. M.)

In almost every judicial system a rule of evidence has been established, in connection with cases of homicide, after sad experience and after warnings resulting from the punishment of innocent people. This rule may be stated as follows: A conviction for murder is never allowed to take place, unless the body has been found, or there is equivalent proof of death by circumstantial evidence leading directly to that result.

No doubt can arise where the dead body is found; its discovery affords sufficient evidence of death, and often the cause of death—but where a person disappears suddenly and he is unheard from, unless there is sufficient proof of the fact that he was murdered, no one can be convicted for his death.

The case of Mr. Small, which has for the last year baffled the police of this country and is still far from being decided, is an instance of a sudden disappearance. Will Doughty be punished for the death of Small? Is it possible to convict him without the discovery of the "Corpus Delicti"? John Doughty may thank the Lord that he is living in the 20th century, for had such an incident occurred years ago then the reader may conclude from the following story that he would by this time be six feet underground with his feet turned towards the daisies.

In the year 1660 three people were hung in Gloucestershire, England, for the supposed murder of William Harrison. Harrison was a steward at Campden, being 70 years of age, and had been at this employment for 50 years. On the 16th of August, 1660, he went to a nearby village to collect rents for his mistress, and, being away longer than usual, his wife ordered her servant, John Perry, to go out and meet his master. This was at about nine o'clock in the evening.

The whole night passed and neither returned, so Harrison's son was sent early next morning in search of the missing people. He met Perry, who said that he was unable to find the steward. Both proceeded to different places inquiring after the lost man. On the way they were shown a hat, band and comb, the property of Mr. Harrison, which an old woman had discovered. They searched the vicinity, but no trace of Harrison could be found.

News of the steward's disappearance greatly excited the villagers, who turned out en masse to search for him, but without success.

Mrs. Harrison became suspicious of her servant Perry; he had failed to return the night he was sent out, and Perry was called before the Justice of the Peace and examined. He said that he had gone forth that evening and returned home three times, being afraid of the dark. At twelve he went out again, lost his way on account of a mist, and lay under a hedge the rest of the night. At daybreak he continued and shortly afterwards met his master's son. Witnesses corroborated this evidence. On being asked why he went out at twelve o'clock, and was afraid to go out at 9 o'clock, he said that the moon shone brightly at the former hour. He was further asked why he had not entered his mistress' home, when returning from his search before 12 to find out whether his master had arrived. He said that he knew his master had not arrived because there was a light in the chamber window, which wouldn't be there if his master were home.

He was kept in custody and shortly afterwards re-examined, and his evidence was the same as that given at the first inquiry. However, it is said that while under guard he told stories of his master's death. To some he told one narrative and to others a different one. On being examined a third time he said that his master was murdered (and here arises the great tragedy) by his mother and brother. The justice asked the prisoner to think over his statement, as he may draw more innocent blood upon his head. Nevertheless, he insisted that it was the truth.

John Perry told the Justice of the Peace that his mother and brother always wanted to murder Harrison, that he informed his relatives when his master went to collect rents; that on the eventful day the murder was planned. The prisoner told the justice that on coming up to the scene of the tragedy, he saw his master on the ground, his brother on top of him and his mother standing by; that the money the steward had was stolen; and the dead body was finally thrown in a great sink.

As a result of this confession the justice ordered the arrest of Joan Perry and her son, Richard. The sink was searched and absolutely nothing was found therein. The two new prisoners denied the truth of the confession, and swore they knew nothing of the disappearance of Harrison.

Many weeks passed, and after a series of events not connected with the actual charge of murder, John, Joan and Richard Perry were brought before Mr. Justice Turner, who refused to try them because the body of Harrison had not been found.

However, at the next Assizes the prisoners were again brought up for trial before another judge. They pleaded not guilty, and when John's confession was proved, the unfortunate man said that he was insane at the time he made it, and that it was not true.

The jury found them all guilty of murder, and they were sentenced to death. The mother was hung first, because she was reputed a witch. Her two sons soon followed her, all professing innocence to the last moment.

If the story ended here, if nothing further occurred, no great pity would be shown towards those who were executed. But a few years afterwards the miscarriage of justice, which actually took place, became apparent. Wiliam Harrison, steward to the Viscountess at Campden, and on account of whom three human beings died, returned to his native village with a sad tale.

Briefly stated, it was that on his way to demand rents he had been attacked by highwaymen, who severely injured him—carried him off to the coast, where he was placed upon a vessel. After being there about six weeks, he had recovered, and was taken aboard a Turkish vessel and conveyed to Turkey, where he was sold as a slave to a doctor. This doctor died and he fled. After great suffering and hardships he managed to reach Portugal, where an Englishman provided passage for him, and he reached his native village.

Three innocent people died because the Court failed to recognise the principle, so well settled now, that where the body is nowhere to be found, no one should be punished.

Why did John Perry make such a confession? No one knows exactly. But one may well imagine that, being under the constant pressure of the guards, he actually became insane. Nevertheless, even if he confessed to participation in a crime, having told of the place in which he threw the body, the fabrication of such a confession should have been clear, when no trace of the corpse could be found.

Similar cases have come to the notice of courts in other countries and as a result the principle enunciated above is well settled everywhere.

OIL-BURNING LOCOMOTIVES ON CHILEAN RAILROADS.

Chile, experimenting with gasoline as a fuel for locomotives on the government railroads, appears to have discovered that great economies can be effected with this substitute for coal. Yet the immediate reason for changing is that coal has been hard to get, and what there is of it in Chile has reached there in irregular shipments. Not all the relative saving from using gasoline can be of great advantage, apparently, if, as appears to be the fact, gasoline can be obtained no more readily than the fuel which it is intended to supplant. The first oil-burning locomotive out of Valparaiso is reported to have hauled only a 100-ton train, instead of the usual one of 300 tons, "as a consequence of the lack of oil fuel." Evidently Chileans are setting great store by the negotiations, now under way, for getting oil from the United States and Mexico.

Mike Murphy Joins.

"Mike Murphy" was a Jew and, as usual, ran a clothing store. An organizer of the Knights of Columbus, seeing the name above the door, left a membership blank. "Mike" signed the application and, as all "Murphy's" are eligible to the Knights of Columbus, he was duly elected.

When too late the members discovered their mistake. They couldn't make him resign; there were no charges they could prefer against him, so they made a motion to give a banquet at the expense of the club, and that any member not attending or partaking of the food be suspended.

"Mike" spoke strong for a free banquet; the motion was carried.

Someone then moved that nothing but ham, pork and pigs' knuckles be served at the feast. "Mister Brestdent," he cried, "it isn't rite you should hev such a moshen. You know a Jew can't eat ham or any of the odder pig meat what you are gonna hev, und if I don't attend you will suspend me, if I do attend and don't eat you fine me. Vat kind of monkey beezness you tink dis is? If you Irishers are gonna be so smart I will show you und stend by my rights vat the constitusen gife me to amend any moshen vat is made, and I moof yo, therefore, Mr. Bresident, that ve hef the banquet on Friday night."

TRAMP WILL TAKE PLACE AS PLANNED

Final Details Have Been Decided for the Evening.

TO-MORROW AT UNION.

Many Snowshoers Will Meet to Take Part in Trip Up the Mountain.

Unless prevented by adverse weather conditions, the snowshoe tramp, as announced before the holidays, will take place to-morrow, Jan. 6th. All arrangements have been completed, and it is anticipated that this event will prove the most successful of its kind ever held at McGill. In all, some hundred people have signified their intention of being present, and it is expected that even more tickets will be disposed of during the next two days.

The starting point will be the Union, where all the snowshoers are requested to gather at seven-thirty p.m. sharp, so as to enable the completion of the filling out of programmes before the scheduled departure at eight o'clock. After leaving the Union, the party will proceed along a course over the Mountain, the covering of which it is estimated will take about two hours. On the return from the trip refreshments will be served by the Union Cafeteria staff, which alone should make for the success of the evening.

Snowshoes may be obtained at Jas. Smith's store on University Street, immediately below St. Catherine. It is hoped that everyone will come to the Union fully equipped in this respect to avoid inconvenient delay in the carrying out of the programme.

Full particulars will appear in tomorrow's "Daily."

AFTERNOON TEA HELD DEC. 26TH

Mrs. Gurd Was in Charge of Sunday Function.

On Sunday, December 26th, in Strathcona Hall, the Ladies' Auxiliary of the McGill Y.M.C.A. held another of their very much appreciated teas. The hostess was Mrs. Gurd, who, with her many kind assistants, provided a most enjoyable programme for the twenty students or so who were present. Chairs were grouped around the open fireplace, which was decorated with Christmas trimmings, while several tables neatly fitted out gave the reading room the desired homelike appearance.

Next Sunday, January 9th, Mrs Johnson will be the lady in charge, and an equally pleasant time is being prepared and anticipated by those thoughtful people who are sparing no energies to make Sunday a real day to many.

WILL GIVE TOWN HOUSING COURSES

Town Planning, Housing and Water Works Will be Dealt With.

The Commission of Conservation has arranged with Canadian Universities for courses of lectures during the current session by its expert advisers on town planning and housing and on water-powers and hydro-electric and allied problems. Those on town planning and housing will be delivered chiefly by the Commission's expert adviser, Mr. Thomas Adams, and will include lectures at McGill, Toronto, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, Dalhousie, Acadia and Fredericton Universities. The lectures on water-powers and hydro-electric and allied problems will be given by the Commission's engineer, Mr. Arthur V. White, who is recognized as one of the highest authorities on Canada's fuel problem and on the development of the water-powers of the St. Lawrence, Niagara and other great power rivers of Canada.

The most extensive series of town planning and housing lectures will be delivered at McGill during the second term, between January and April. Lectures will also be given on housing under the Department of Social Service at McGill and Toronto. This is a forward step in University teaching, and is in accordance with the fixed policy of the Commission of Conservation to utilize the services of its expert staff in the most effective manner. During the past eleven years they have been investigating Canada's natural resources. The Commission is now in a position to make recommendations of the highest value respecting the problems associated with their efficient development and to furnish accurate data respecting their character and extent.
